MAKING MEN STRONG.

Hypochondriacs, valetudinarians and health seekers generally could learn valuable lessons, it appears, by considering the ways of the prize fighters. A few months ago James J. Jeffries, the white champion who retired from the prize ring six years ago because there was no one left to compete with him for the title, weighed nearly 300 pounds. He was slow and sluggish in his movements and carried a paunch that would have put to shame the proverbial alderman. The experts declared that it would be a physical impossibility for Jeffries to get into condition to fight again. But last spring when the gigantic negro Jack Johnson won the pugilistic championship and there appeared to be no white fighter equal to the task of defeating him Jeffries was called upon by the sporting world with a unanimous voice to re-enter the ring and redeem the supremacy of the white race by defeating the black. Jeffries refused to give a definite answer but since then he has been touring this country and Europe giving boxing exhibitions and using the training methods by which prize fighters are accustomed to reduce their surplus flesh and put themselves into fighting condition which means a maximum of wind and brawn with a minimum of surplus flesh. As a result the other day when he signed articles to fight the negro some time before next July the foremost sporting writer in this country declared that Jeffries weighed only 220 pounds and was lighter and faster on his feet than ever. As he expressed it: "All the old time vitality is there. He is fairly bursting with it. He is as fast as a lightweight—kittenish playful, yet massive and powerful, as Hercules." By no regime known to medical science could this metamorphosis in human flesh have been performed, and yet to the trainers of prize fighters it is accepted as a matter of course in the natural order of things.

A still more remarkable transformation was effected twenty years ago, when John L. Sullivan, the then world's champion pugilist, was matched to fight Jake Kilrain, who had been specially trained and picked from the world's best fighters to defeat Sullivan. Fox, the owner of the Police Gazette, hated Sullivan because the latter had refused scornfully to wear an alleged $5,000 diamond-studded belt which Fox had ordered as the emblem of the world's championship. Sullivan had just recovered from a desperate attack of typhoid fever and the New York newspapers interviewed a dozen or more of that city's best physicians who declared that no man could be made fit for any severe physical feat within from six months to two years after undergoing such a severe sickness, particularly typhoid fever. Fox believed he had caught his enemy in a trap and gleefully anticipated Sullivan's downfall at the hands of Kilrain. But Sullivan put himself in the hands of Muldoon, the ex-champion wrestler, and after spending six weeks at the wrestler's training farm—where many statesmen and business men have been restored to health—he appeared at the ring-side in perfect fighting condition and after a terrific battle, lasting over two hours, under the burning rays of a July sun in the semi-tropical region of southern Mississippi, he defeated Kilrain with comparative ease. After the fight Sullivan appeared fresher than most of the spectators, many of whom fainted at the ringside on account of the fierce heat. It would seem that in the matter of recuperation of the human system, and taking off superfluous flesh without impairing the vitality and strength of the subject, medical science has much to learn from the followers of the prize ring.

He crossed the Rockies and the Alps.
He crossed the Pyrenees;
The Himalaya highest peaks
He topped with graceful ease.
He crossed the Andes with a smile,
He spared no mountain chain;
He did it very high in air
Upon his aeroplane.

MRS. J. G. SHAW CLAIMED BY DEATH

Mrs. Blanche McAllister Shaw, wife of J. G. Shaw and daughter of Mrs. E. J. McAllister, died at 2:25 a. m., today, at the home of her mother, 809 Fourth street. Mrs. Shaw was but 22 years old and had been ill for a long time.

It will be remembered that Mrs. Shaw, together with her husband, came to Las Vegas about a year ago from Columbia, Mo. Since that time her health had been very frail, she being a constant sufferer from rheumatism and heart trouble. All that medical skill and loving hands could do, were done for her, but aside from prolonging her life, the efforts were of no avail.

Although a resident of this city but a year, the deceased had many friends and all loved her for her mild, sweet words and patient suffering. Her life knew only devotion to duty and admiration for all that was good and beautiful. Her mind and heart were stored with rich treasures and she left these to brighten and shine in the lives of her immediate relatives and friends.

Mrs. Shaw was a devout Christian, having joined the Baptist church at the age of fifteen years. One of the things which no doubt hastened the end was the death last July of an only child, Juanita, at the early age of nine months. She grieved over the death of her baby almost constantly.

There remain to mourn her loss, besides a mother, five sisters and three brothers, namely, Miss Nora McAllister, Mrs. Edward S. Comstock and C. W. McAllister, of Las Vegas; Mrs. T. W. Stewart, of Ivalde, Tex.; Mrs. W. P. Proctor, of Sturgeon, Mo.; Mrs. N. B. Green and E. G. McAllister, of Columbia, Mo., and G. E. McAllister of St. Louis.

The funeral will take place at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from the McAllister home. Services will be conducted by Rev. Bishop, of the Baptist church. Burial will be in Odd Fellows cemetery under the direction of J. C. Johnson & Son, undertakers.

C. E. Hall, a Masonic insurance agent, departed this afternoon for Albuquerque.
